ABSTRACT

Purpose/Aims: We explored different paradigms in university management and sustainable national development through innovation and entrepreneurial inquisitiveness by comparing them to current trends, and issues in the domain of this academic work.
Methodology/Procedures: The authors of this paper critically, yet objectively and comparatively, examined the different ideas and strategies suggested by models aimed at improving and promoting innovation and entrepreneurial interest in modern societies. It provides a relatively broad view the role of entrepreneurial development in national development. It evaluates the concepts of development and entrepreneur, entrepreneurial education for development, innovation and entrepreneurial nosiness in relationship to university management.
Results/Conclusion: The study observed that it is possible that when a university provides adequate
